

In his first letter to Timothy, Paul wrote that “All scripture is inspired by God and is useful for teaching, for reproof, for correction, and for training in righteousness.”¹ As Episcopalians, we read the scripture aloud every Sunday, at midweek services, and at special feast days throughout the year. Within the context of a community of believers, this allows us to “read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest”² the word of God so that we might be able to experience, with others, what it means to live out our faith in the world. It is also beneficial to immerse ourselves in the scripture on our own, so that our lives might be transformed by an understanding of the story of God in the world, from the creation of the world to the end of history. Scripture reveals to us the work of Christ and what God has desired for all of our lives from the very beginning. Knowing the story of God’s work in the world allows us to take those passages we hear on Sunday and to make connections among all the scriptures we hear and read, and allow those connections to draw us ever closer to God.

The following provides a plan for reading the Bible in one year. It is broken up into passages from the Old Testament, a Psalm, and the New Testament. The Psalms are numbered so that you will read through each of the Psalms twice in the year, and the New Testament is broken up so that you will read through it once. Because there are fewer than 365 chapters in the New Testament, you will see that for most of the year, you have an extra day throughout the week for which no reading is assigned. You can do with this extra day as you wish: read your favorite Psalm on that day for the entire year (e.g. Psalm 23 for 52 weeks), memorize a passage of scripture, add in a reading from a spiritual writer that you enjoy, meditate, or just take a break and relax. This note (*) is on every page.

You can start this plan on any day of the year, as it is numbered for a standard (non-leap) year, though it might be beneficial to start it the day after your birthday - so you finish the Bible on your birthday the next year - on the first of January, or even on the first Sunday in Advent so you follow the readings during the Church Year. Whatever your choice, I pray that reading the Bible from cover to cover will open up the mystery of God, the joy of your salvation, and strengthen your faith.
